

What Do You Consider Lethal? Train the Trainers Free Workshop

Monday, October 3, 2016 in Fargo, ND from 9:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.

The North Dakota Department of Health, Division of Injury Prevention and Control, is offering a one-day educational program and training for first responders, educators, and health professionals interested in helping to combat the #1 killer of teens car crashes. The day will provide education, resources and networking to assist attendees in furthering evidence-based teen traffic safety efforts.

About the Trainer: Impact Teen Drivers (ITD) provides evaluated and evidence-based programs, materials and campaigns to reach teens, younger audiences, parents, and community members about the dangers of reckless and distracted driving. Lead facilitator, Dr. Kelly Browning, Executive Director of Impact Teen Drivers, will facilitate a five-hour comprehensive training to prepare attendees to use ITD programs and materials free in their local communities.

About the Training: "Train the Trainers" is an engaging workshop for participants to learn about the issue of distracted and reckless driving itself, and become empowered to address it in the most effective manner with recent and cogent research concerning teen driving behaviors and attitudes, driving statistics, and Graduated Driver Licensing laws, this translates all the information into actionable solutions. Participants are provided with evidence-based tools to deliver high-energy presentations focused on the dangers of reckless and distracted driving. Participants will become well-versed in the "What do You Consider Lethal?" program, and learn how to effectively communicate the essentials of safe driving to teens, parents, and members of their communities. Participants will receive informational handouts, guides, and templates for facilitating discussion and preparing presentations about teen safe driving for their own reference and to share with teens, other educators, first responders, health professionals, or community members.
