
ELIGIBILITY

Eligibility of Women's Way Clients

Who is eligible?

Only women are eligible to receive breast and cervical cancer services through the National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program (NBCCEDP) and the Women's Way program as mandated in the federal 1501-A-1 Public Law 101-354.

What is the priority population?

The priority population for Women's Way breast cancer screening services is women between the ages of 50 and 64 who have low incomes (up to 200 percent of federal poverty level), who have not been screened in the past year, and who have no other source of health-care reimbursement, such as insurance. Recruitment efforts should be concentrated on this population.

- The broader eligible population for breast cancer screening for Women's Way includes women between the ages of 40 and 64 who have low income (up to 200 percent of the federal poverty level) and are uninsured or underinsured (whose health insurance does not fully cover screening services). Once a woman is enrolled in Women's Way, the program provides breast cancer screening services at appropriate, recommended screening intervals.

The priority population for Women's Way cervical cancer screening services is women between the ages of 40 and 64 who have low incomes (up to 200 percent of federal poverty level), who have never been screened or have not been screened in the past five years, and who have no other source of health-care reimbursement, such as insurance. Recruitment should be concentrated on this population.

- The broader eligible population for cervical cancer screening for Women's Way includes women between the ages of 40 and 64 who have low incomes (up to 200 percent of the federal poverty level) and are uninsured or underinsured (whose health insurance does not fully cover screening services). Once a woman is enrolled in Women's Way, the program provides cervical cancer screening services at appropriate, recommended screening intervals.
